SPONSORSHIP PROSPECTUS

8TH ANNUAL NORDP RESEARCH DEVELOPMENT CONFERENCE

MAY 23-25, 2016
ORLANDO, FL

2016 NORDP RESEARCH DEVELOPMENT CONFERENCE

The National Organization of Research Development Professionals is the only professional organization dedicated to the field of research development. Founded in 2009, NORDP is an international organization that helps university faculty and other researchers mobilize ideas into true knowledge creation.

Research development professionals come from universities, colleges, museums, research centers, government agencies, and independent laboratories and institutes—and we play an increasingly important role in the strategic deployment of university and other resources. Research development professionals are largely Ph.D. and Master's-level experts. We work directly with investigators, central administrations, corporate and foundation relations, university federal relations, and officers at government agencies. Our goals are to help organizations attract extramural research funding, increase institutional competitiveness, create research relationships, and foster innovation. We therefore need tools, systems, publishers, consultants—solutions from companies that can help us move ideas, promote our institutions, and, most importantly, catalyze research.

The Annual NORDP Research Development Conference is a three-day event that offers exceptional marketing and networking opportunities to decision-makers in the research development world.

CONFERENCE MISSION

Invited speakers from universities and federal agencies, as well as research executives and specialists who are in the research development trenches join together for robust conversation and planning. Important facets of the conference include understanding big-picture themes such as key trends in federal and private research funding, new areas of research priority, the latest tools for cataloguing research expertise and funding opportunities, strategies for supporting large-scale proposal development by interdisciplinary research teams, and implementing strategic initiatives that impel institutional competitiveness.

Our conference is a platform for networking and collaboration, increasing the visibility of the research development field while also highlighting the role of our sponsors in knowledge mobilization. Whether it is to provide an open forum to guide future funding priorities, to bring together strategic thinkers to solve problems, to host discussions and workshops or to connect research development professionals with new resources and tools, our annual conference provides an atmosphere that is unmatched in its ability to promote research development.
