

Communication “GATEWAY” Accelerates Global Research Development

● About RUNJ

The Research University Network of Japan (RUNJ) is an organization formed on a voluntary basis by universities and research institutes with the aim of improving research capabilities.

Members come together, beyond the bounds of organizations, to take advantage of limited resources and effectively find workable solutions to common problems that hinder research development.

● Ample Opportunities for New Partnership

Gateway is an email-based information circulation system that aims to improve opportunities for national and international partnerships.

Emails about potential partnership opportunities are delivered via Gateway to RUNJ member universities, and interested scientists and/or research development specialists can then respond immediately to the sender.

● New Age of International Collaborative Research Development

Strong cooperation among research development specialists is critical to success in international research projects, especially when it comes to attracting funds.

RUNJ is optimistic that “Gateway” will be a driving force in bringing Japanese research administrators into the heart of global research development activities.
